UK Outlook for Thursday 12 Aug 2021 to Saturday 21 Aug 2021:
While more settled for a time at the start of the period, albeit with rain over western and northwestern areas, conditions are set to become changeable again. By the weekend there is an increasing likelihood of thicker cloud bringing further rain to northwestern areas, with stronger winds here, and these unsettled conditions are likely to move southeastwards across the UK over the weekend. Beyond this it is likely to remain changeable; confidence is low in terms of detail, but most places will likely see showers or longer rain spells, interspersed with some drier, more settled periods; these likely becoming more common into the end of the period. Strong winds are possible at times, especially in the northwest. Temperatures likely to be around average, perhaps warm in the east and southeast.
